2. Citations and explanations (Rule 70.7)

Reference is made to the following documents:

D1: KR 1993-0019365 (18 October 1993)

Claims 1-4 of the present invention relates to a stone slicer comprising a base on which a stone is mounted, four columns installed at the base, a pair of platforms, a platform driving means, a belt saw driving means, and a belt saw comprising a caterpillar, characterized by the inclusion of a subsidiary pulley and all kinds of driving motors.

D1 discloses a band-saw type stone slicer comprising a platform support means, a platform, an upper and lower power member of the platform, and an intermittent rotation power generating means.

The following are comparisons between the present claims and the cited document D1:

The present invention is the same as the cited invention in the main technical features, that is, the platform support means, the platform, the platform driving means, and the saw driving means. There is a slight difference between the present invention and the cited invention in that in the present invention, the base on which a stone is mounted and the plurality of belt saws are additionally provided with a vertical gear and a driving pulley, whereas the cited invention does not have a base on which a stone is mounted and has only one belt saw. However, the stone base can be additionally provided, and the number of belt saw can be readily selected and applied by a person skilled in the art, where necessary, and consequently, said features of the present invention do not involve any technical difficulty.

Accordingly, it would be obvious to a person skilled in the art to arrive at the present invention from the features of D1. Therefore, the subject matter of claims 1-4 is considered to lack an inventive step under PCT Article 33(3).
